Has His Sister Sent to the Almshouse Under False Pretenses.

THE WOMAN HAD MONEY.

Mrs. Jane Fowler Spends Weeks in Poorhouse Through Representations of Warren Rese.

Through the efforts of Supt. George Blair and one of his investigators, there has been unearthed a story of unbrotherly treatment, with, it is alleged, larceny and the administration of drugs As a side issue. The case is character-ized by the Superintendent of the Outdoor Poor as being the most remark able which had ever come under his official observation.

The victim is Mrs. Jane Fowler, 70 years of age, a woman of refinement and fine sensibilities, who has spen several weeks in the almshouse lately on representations made to Mr. Blair that she was friendless, homeless and penniless, but who is, it appears, the sister of two wealthy women, one of whom is said to own property to the extent of $4,000,000.

The facts as given by Mr. Blat show that on Aug. 9 Mrs. Fowler was taken to the office of the Outdoor Poor by her brother, War ren H. Rose, who told the clerks there that his sister was friendless, homeless and moneyless, and that he had been caring for her at his house, No. 82 Greenwich street. He made a deposition to the effect that Mrs. Fowler was a widow and that she had no means o support, and asked that she be sent t the almshouse. An investigation was Mrs. Fowler's legal residence was in New Jersey. So she was refused admittance to the almshouse.

Two weeks later she was again brought to the Office of Outdoor Poor, at the Charitles Department pler. She was accompanied by Dr. Frederick Van Vilet, of No. 228 West Eleventh street. Dr. Van Vliet told practically the same story about the woman that Rose had told on the previous visit and added that she was "a little senile." The case was referred to the Superintendent per-temporarily." he said to the doctor, "and will see what is to be done later." He then directed Frank McAuliffe, one of his investigators, to look into the case and told him to probe the circumstances surrounding the representations which had been made about Mrs. Fowler. , McAuliffe went to the almshouse. learned that Mr. Rose had told the nurse that Mrs. Fowler would wish to have some letters written.

"Write the letters for her." it is alleged he said, "and then destroy them.
They are likely to annoy some people whom Mrs. Fowler used to know well.

RUSH OF WORK but who do not care to be bothered any more. If you will do this, I will see that you are recompensed."

Among the people to whom Mrs. Jane wrote was Mrs. L. F. Fowler, who has charge of the millinery de-Rose was completely unnerved at the knowledge that McAuliffe was in possession of the facts. He broke down and asked that an opportunity be given him to restore the money to his sister.

McAuliffe took a carriage and got Mrs. Ls. F. Fowler and Mrs. Jane Fowler (who bad been brought over from the aimshouse for the purpose, and drove to Rose's house, in Greenwich street.

Rose expressed his willingness to go with them to the Irving Savings Bank. He did so and drew out $602.51, which he gave to McAuliffe to keep for Mrs.

Jane Fowler. He confessed that he had used $56.52 of the money on his own account.

Mr. Blair said that the relatives in Mr. Salar said that the relatives in the said that the said.

Mr. Blair said that the relatives included two sisters of Mrs. Jane Fowler, who are both very wealthy women. One of them is reputed to be worth $4,000,000.

He intimated strongly that the matter would be laid before the District-Attorney with a request that he investigate at once and take whatever actio nformation Said to Have Been Sen Out from Mulberry Street This Morning.

Tip Goes Out That Business May Be Done Without Interruption.

The tip went forth to-day-and on ood information it had a starting point at No. 300 Mulberry street-that all the pool-rooms of the big gambling syndicate might now do business without fear of interference. It was said that absolute protection had been guaranteed and that business might be done this after-

Until Election Day, therefore, the pool-rooms may run wide open. This nove was taken to mean that the Tammany men wished to make the best of that the organization is going down to lefeat. This feeling has prompted those who have already waxed rich from ool-room operations to take advantage of the next month's business.

Under the agreement there will be none but Tammany men employed by the gamblers. Even the telegraph operators must be friends of the Wigwam. At least 200 rooms will be open, and as, n addition to protection money, they pay $30 a day each to the employees his means that $6,000 a day will find its way to the pockets of the faithful.

Even through the period when the col-room men were instructed to shut down or "lie low" many of them did business quietly with patrons who were known to them well. Of late, however, there were signs of relaxation and less care was exercised in looking over those who went to lay bets. The tip to-day was the usual ante-election permission to run wide open. It is also said that while the new condition of things will interfere with race-track managers will not be allowed to intervene.

Frank Moss, when told of the tip to the pool-room keepers, said:
"It does not at all surprise me. While I have not heard reports on the matter from any of the agents of the society, I believe that information has been sent out promising protection. The pool-room men have been doing about as they pleased with Tammany. Election is coming and the money is needed. When the heaviest noel-room keepers in the city make public appearances at Tammany Hall conventions it shows what a power they are in the organization.

"As to the action of the society, I can say nothing at present."
